Philip G. Hall is new Cherry Grove pastor

The Rev. Philip G. Hall became the new pastor of Cherry Grove Baptist Church of Cerro Gordo on June 1.

His ministry at Cherry Grove began officially on that day and an installation ceremony will be held for him during July.

"The priority and main thrust of my ministry is bringing the Word of God to people in a way that they can apply to their everyday life," said Hall about the major emphasis of his ministry.

Hall and his wife Janith are from New Bern and have four children.

He is a former education director of Calvary Baptist Church in West Virginia and has pastored churches in that state, Virginia, and most recently, Crossroads Baptist Church in New Bern.

Obtaining a bachelor's degree in business administration from Glenville State College, Hall completed his master's and doctorate degrees from Luther Rice Bible Institute and Seminary. He has had additional training in educational ministries, church programming, grief ministries and church conflict management.

Prior to going into the ministry, Hall served in the United States Air Force Aerospace Audio Visual Service. He also has owned and operated a retail business.

Other denominational activities in which he has served include: member of the West Virginia Baptist Convention Executive Board, chairman of the West Virginia Baptist Convention Religious Education Committee, president of the East River Baptist Pastors Association and president of the Atlantic Baptist Association Ministers Association.
Cherry Grove Church taps Hall as pastor
The Rev. Philip G. Hall became the new pastor of Cherry Grove Baptist Church of Cerro Gordo on June 1.

His ministry at Cherry Grove began officially on that day and an installation ceremony will be held for him during July.

"The priority and main thrust of my ministry is bringing the Word of God to people in a way that they can apply to their everyday life," said Hall about the major emphasis of his ministry.

Hall and his wife Janith are from New Bern and have four children.

He is a former education director of Calvary Baptist Church in West Virginia and has pastored churches in that state, Virginia, and most recently, Crossroads Baptist Church in New Bern.

Obtaining a bachelor's degree in business administration from Glenville State College, Hall completed his master's and doctorate degrees from Luther Rice Bible Institute and Seminary. He has had additional training in educational ministries, church programming, grief ministries and church conflict management.

Prior to going into the ministry, Hall served in the United States Air Force Aerospace Audio Visual Service. He also has owned and operated a retail business.

Other denominational activities in which he has served include: member of the West Virginia Baptist Convention Executive Board, chairman of the West Virginia Baptist Convention Religious Education Committee, president of the East River Baptist Pastors Association and president of the Atlantic Baptist Association Ministers Association.