SOCIAL JUSTICE

RESOURCES

The world is heavy. People are angry, overwhelmed, tired, and grieving. Together, we mourn the deaths of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, Tony McDade, Nina Pop, Rayshard Brooks, and the many other Black people who have lost their lives to state-sanctioned violence and/or white supremacy.

This is not new. For hundreds of years, we have borne witness to the subjugation, harm, oppression, and death of Black bodies. The Office of Civic & Community Engagement is in solidarity with the Black community. Black Lives Matter.

It is not enough to be non-racist; we must be actively anti-racist. We are committed to the process of lifelong learning and challenging white supremacy in our spaces, and we encourage you to join us.

Are you looking for a way to get involved? Start with our website, which features various resources to learn more about race, racism, and anti-racism; join us in conversation through Critical Community Lunch Hour; learn alongside your peers in our book club; or commit to supporting a local organization in our community. There is space for you in this movement. We invite you to join us.

SOCIAL JUSTICE RESOURCES

From books and articles to podcasts and television shows, no matter the medium, learn more about different social justice topics through a curated list from the OCCE! See something that is missing? Submit a resource, and we'll add it!
