Wake Forest Coach Paul Amen failed to divulge the special plans he has up his sleeve for the Clemson game Saturday as he put his Deacons through a rough workout yesterday.

At his Monday press conference Amen said he was planning a "radical change" for the Clemson game but wouldn't say what he had in mind.

He said there may be one or two personnel changes but wasn't ready to be specific. He had three new faces in the lineup against North Carolina last week—quarterback Charlie Carpenter and halfbacks Kenny Ferrell and Jerry Balt.

"We'll be facing another strong offense this week and our defense will have to be better prepared than it was last Saturday," the Wake Forest coach said.

He noted that Clemson was leading the Atlantic Coast Conference in both total offense, with 338 yards per game, and in rushing, with 241 yards per game.

All phases of defense were thoroughly reviewed in the workout. The reserves and freshmen alternated running Clemson plays at the regulars in the long contact session. All regulars except halfback Winston Futch took part. Futch worked in sweat clothing for the second straight day. He is expected to be ready for some action Saturday. He missed the North Carolina game because of a leg injury.

'Gonna Have to Bear Down,' Howard Tells Tigers

CLEMSON, S. C.—"Boys, you just didn't play a good game," was the way Coach Frank Howard summed up the South Carolina game to his team at a squad meeting this week.

However, Howard told the players that that game was out of the way and it was time to start thinking about Wake Forest, Clemson's foe this Saturday at Memorial Stadium.

"I thought we had a pretty good team after the first four games," Howard went on to say, "and I still think we do, but you're gonna have to bear down from here on out. To have a good football team, there has to be sacrifice all the way round. There is no sense of playing like we did last Thursday and we don't plan to do so any more this year."

The team was given its basic defenses that are to be used against the Deacons and then a review of the South Carolina game was held. In it, the mistake of each player was read off and each play was run twice so the miscue could be seen and absorbed.

When the projector had run the last play, the Big Thursday game was put away and thoughts turned to the Deacons.

Charlie Waller, offensive backfield coach, has been watching the Wake crew during its 3-3 record this season and reports that the Tigers can look for a wide open attack Saturday. Against North Carolina Deacon passers hurled 32 aerials, and the halfback exhibited a good running game.

The Deacons are returning to Clemson with a remember-last-year look in their eyes. It was just less than a year ago that Wake had the Tigers reeling all during the game and led, 6-0, with less than two minutes to play. Harvey White uncorked a 25-yard, fourth-and-10 pass that found its mark to Whitey

Jordan and on the next play White passed to Doug Cline for the score and then kicked the extra point to give Clemson the lead and save the day against the winless Deacs. In the waning seconds, the Tigers scored again to win, 13-6, but that was probably the hardest earned victory all year long for the Tigers. Certainly, it was the closest. Coach Paul Amen of the Deacons called that loss "the worst I've ever had to take."

The meeting Saturday will be the 24th between the two schools. Clemson owns a 15-8 advantage by virtue of seven straight wins.
