Limited visitation, a volatile student issue for over two months, died last night when the University's executive committee voted against a student proposal to allow women students in men's dorm rooms.

WF Spanish Professor Killed

In Shooting At Rural Store

Marcelino Delgado, an instructor of Spanish at the University for 25 years, was shot and killed Dec. 18 at the rural store where he worked part-time.

Delgado, who was 55, was shot five times, including twice both in the back, the left side, the left forearm, and the right thigh. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Forsyth Memorial Hospital.

The Forsyth County Sheriff's Office said Delgado got a ride from the store, arriving there about six minutes after the killing, but there were no clues in the identity of the assailant.

The shooting occurred at 11:15 p.m. on Dec. 18, which was the last day of classes at the University before the Christmas holidays.

Delgado worked part-time at the store McPhail-Wilson Market at the corner of College and North Shoemaker. He was killed on Oct. 31, 1972.

Gift Has Varied Effects On School

$2 Million Given By Foundation

By DIANE JONES
Managing Editor

The University's largest gift in its 96-year history, a $2 million unrestricted endowment, will be divided among students, faculty and administrators.

The grant was in three parts: $1 million will be used for student scholarships; $1 million will be used for faculty salary increases; and the remaining $1 million will be used for the administration's general fund.

The grant will be used to hire additional professors, to improve student services, and to increase the university's research capabilities.

Reynolda Renovations Near End; Music Room Planned

By FREDDIE MARK
Staff Writer

Reynolda Hall is rapidly nearing one of the most significant changes in its long history, with the construction of a new music room.

The project is one of the last, if not the last, major changes to be made in the historic 150-year-old hall.

The new music room will be located on the first floor of the hall, with a large concert hall capable of seating 500 people.

Mellwani Named First Writer-In-Residence

William F. Mellwani, a well-known poet and writer, will be the first writer-in-residence at the University.

Mellwani has been a professor of English at several universities, including Harvard and Yale. He is also the author of several books on literature and the arts.

He will be in residence for a year, beginning in January, and will teach courses and give readings.

The appointment was announced by the University's chancellor, who said Mellwani's work has made a significant contribution to the study of literature.

Mellwani will be the first writer-in-residence at the University, and his appointment is part of the University's effort to strengthen its literary programs.

The appointment also reflects the University's commitment to fostering creativity and artistic expression in all areas of life.

The University hopes to attract other writers to the campus, and to create a vibrant community of artists and thinkers.
Pictures Tell Part Of The Wake Story Of The Sixties

The 1960's: what effect did they have on the University's development and what do they forecast for its future?

The pictures on this page give only a smattering of the progress of Wake Forest over the last ten years: a new president was inaugurated, a new business school and stadium constructed, and several classroom buildings and coed dormitories built.

Obviously, however, there are some facts of the University's history that cannot be captured in pictures. Pictures, though they may be worth a thousand words, cannot describe the impact of ten years on the University in anything but a physical sense. In the issue of Feb. 13, Old Gold will review with words as well as photographs the story of Wake Forest College and Wake Forest University 1969-1970.
MRC Has Useful Functions

By CAESAR CLARK

The MRC has decided to invest in a new program to provide academic and athletic support for its student-athletes. The program is designed to help students balance their academic and athletic commitments, as well as provide additional support for their academic success. The program is expected to begin in the fall semester and will be open to all MRC students.

The program will offer academic tutoring, study skills workshops, and access to academic advisors. Additionally, the academic support component will include access to a learning center, where students can work on assignments and receive one-on-one help from tutors. The athletic component will include nutrition and physical training support to help student-athletes perform at their best.

The program will be funded through a combination of student fees and institutional support. The initial funding will cover the cost of the program for the first year, and future funding will be determined based on student needs and participation.

The program is expected to have a positive impact on student-athlete performance and success. By providing additional support, the program will help students succeed both on and off the field, and contribute to the overall success of the MRC athletic program.

MRC Is Not Open, Says IFC Head

By CAESAR CLARK

The MRC Board of Trustees has made a decision that is disappointing to many students. I recently attended a meeting of the Board of Trustees where the decision was made to close the MRC for the remainder of the semester. This decision was made due to a lack of funds and the need to redirect resources to other areas of the university.

I understand the financial challenges the university is facing, but I believe this decision is shortsighted. The MRC is a vital part of the university community and provides important services to students. I hope the university can find a way to keep the MRC open, or at least partially open, to ensure that students have access to these services.

Open Recruitment for Free

By CAESAR CLARK

The MRC has opened a new position for an Academic Advisor. The position is open to all students and will focus on providing academic advising and support to students. The advisor will work closely with faculty and staff to provide individualized support to students, helping them to develop their academic plans and goals.

The advisor will also work with student-athletes to ensure that they are meeting their academic requirements. This is an excellent opportunity for students to gain valuable experience in the field of academic advising.

The deadline for applications is March 1st. Students interested in applying should submit their application and a cover letter to the Office of Student Affairs.

The University is proud to announce that it has received a generous donation from the_addr_to_be_disclosed_ family. The donation will be used to fund several academic programs and initiatives, including scholarships for students in need and support for research projects.

We hope that all students will take advantage of these opportunities to improve their academic and personal lives. The University is committed to providing a supportive and inclusive environment for all students, and this donation is a testament to that commitment.
Serious Penalty

Kicking a student out of school...or all of the serious implications to the student's life such an action implies...can be an unjustified penalty for traffic violations. And, frankly, if you think that the Men's Judicial Board decided to levy on you or your car an action just prior to the Christmas holidays, think again.

The penalties were quite brutal as to what they stood. If you had accumulated 5 points on campus, or had been found guilty of four or more traffic violations, your car was impounded, and you were given a $50 fine. When they continued to operate them on campus, the penalties were imposed by the Men's Judicial Board and had been in effect since March. When they continued to operate them on campus, the students were put on probation by the Men's Judicial Board. The students continued to drive the board, the authorities, and the administration behind the scenes until they were finally forced to run.

Consequently, it is true that the board is not to blame for the horrendous violations, but we are not admitting that other alternatives are not or should not be available. The blame is for the state of affairs that can only be relieved by the tortuous traffic of the campus which has been set up in such a way that the board has little leverage in fixing the situation.

A system whereby monetary penalties could be imposed seems to be a much more reasonable approach than suspension. The price one must pay for a ticket can be increased with each one acquired; it is a system which, if properly utilized, could increase the financial limit. And already in the rules is the provision that a student cannot register for the next semester if he has accumulated more than 12 tickets.

Mr. Moran's letters to the editor compromised his position as a member of the traffic committee. He was the chairman of the committee and it is felt that if the penalties he has imposed are to be considered as a law, then an enforcing agency was to be maintained permanently, and the students were sacrificed for the cause.

The Men's Judicial Board has at best, been a marginal force on campus during the past several years. It has occupied itself with infrequent -- and automatic -- cases dealing with the same matter of a student breaking a code machine. The board has been forced to persist in this because of the lack of any administrative body to deal with traffic regulations.

However, it is believed that the board is not to blame for the horrid violations. It is not admitting that other alternatives are not or should not be available. The blame is for the state of affairs that can only be relieved by the tortuous traffic of the campus which has been set up in such a way that the board has little leverage in fixing the situation.

Bodo Beer Visits University;
Plans To Return In Spring

By SUE ENGLISH

Bodo Beer, the University student who was banned from the National Guard Armory earlier this school year, plans to return to the campus in the spring. Bodo has been visiting friends and relatives in the past several months. Although unable to work with his boat, he is independent and insists on trying to do things for himself.

Bodo describes himself as "the boy with the camera." He is still highly interested and actively recognizing, since it will not be possible to perform plastic surgery until he is physically healed.

Admitting that he felt self-conscious about people looking at him as he walked around campus and talked to people, Bodo never expected to be recognized in the fall. The fall that his presence would not be charged for at least six months, and he returned to high school.

Among other friends, Bodo enjoys visiting his three former roommates, Joe Tannan, member of Morticians, R.J. Krohn, former of the Crimson, and Richard Forsman, former of the Minnesota, all of the University.

Where To Recruit?

All college coaches realize that recruiting is the nail of the most important part of their job. A coach at a high school basketball program in the state with a high talent pool will find it much easier to attract top players than a coach at a school with an average talent pool. The different recruiters. A coach's job is to keep his school competitive, but he also has to convince the top players that he is the right person to train them.

Last week's traveling squad visited the University of Mississippi, including the states of Georgia and South Carolina. The coaches and their teams had the opportunity to see the talent that the state has to offer. The coaches are trying to find the right players to build their teams in the future.

Each year the tournament committee selects the top high schools in the state to participate in the tournament. The players of the caliber of Harmon Wall, Will Chamberlain, Noble Athens, Will Howard, Mercedes, and Austin are a good example of the players that have been invited to participate. These schools have had a lot of success in the past, and they have a lot of experience with college basketball. The coaches are trying to use this experience to their advantage in recruiting.

The coaches are also trying to work on building their team's identity. They are trying to make the team more competitive and to make the players more aggressive. The coaches are looking for players who are willing to work hard and who are willing to be part of a team.

The coaches are also trying to make the team more attractive to the players. They are trying to make the team more competitive and to make the players more aggressive. The coaches are looking for players who are willing to work hard and who are willing to be part of a team.

Wake Edges Past ECU And Md. But Blows A Big One To Duke

Wake Forest completed their pre-Christmas schedule by winning two of their last three contests. The Deacs, off a 116-63 and 91-42 Southern Conference South victory over East Carolina last week, evened their current season mark at 1-1, and are now playing non-conference ball.

The Deacons were beaten by a score of 29-20 in the game. The Deacons were only able to score 6 points in the game, and the opposing team scored 23 points.
