291 Group makes free microfilm service available to churches

The North Carolina Baptist Historical Collection, Z. Smith Reynolds Library, Wake Forest University, has microfilmed records of Double Shoals Baptist Church in Shelby for the period 1899 to 1994. The church now has a security copy of their records on file in the event something happens to their original records.

John R. Woodard, director of the N.C. Baptist Historical Collection, said that these filmed records would join those from 48 other Cleveland County Baptist church records now on microfilm in the collection. Woodard invited all other North Carolina Baptist churches — including missionary, primitive and black Baptist churches — to take advantage of this free service and have their records preserved.

Interested churches or individuals should contact Woodard at (910) 759-5089 or write to him at the North Carolina Baptist Historical Collection, Z. Smith Reynolds Library, Wake Forest University, Box 7777, Winston-Salem, N.C. 27109.

'Disaster pastors' prepared for worst-case scenarios

Steve L. Grimes

SHELBY — When Beau LoveLace, Cleveland County Emergency Management Director, prepares for a major disaster, he calls out people specially trained to help. Firefighters and rescue workers, hazardous materials teams, emergency medical personnel and pastors.

Pastors?
In Cleveland County, they'll be on the scene.

If an airliner should ever crash or a nuclear power plant spew radiation into Cleveland County, Charles Reed will be one of the first people LoveLace calls. Reed is director of church and community ministries for the Kings Mountain Baptist Association.

He'll activate the "disaster pastors."

"I have maintained a data base of ministers we can call in time of disaster," said Reed.

He's done it informally for about eight years. For the past year, LoveLace, Reed and Cleveland County Sheriff's Department Chaplain Jim Brackett have met with a group of 25 or so ministers who've signed on to help with an emergency.

The Rev. Jeff Brindle, senior pastor at Elizabeth Baptist Church in Shelby, signed on about three months ago.

"Beau has told us this is an area where we need help," he says. "That's a time when people are vulnerable. People are confronted with the most abnormal and unusual circumstances."

His church members believe in the concept as well. They donated the bright orange vests pastors will wear during a disaster.

"We were just saying that we were not going to be prepared if we didn't put something in place," Brackett said. He's also pastor of Westview Baptist Church in Shelby.

So far the group of ministers has met three times, and two of them have been trained by state emergency management personnel. Brackett is trained as a public information officer, and Eric Davis, pastor of Double Shoals Baptist Church in Shelby, has been trained in management of mass casualty situations.

"They're available for anything," LoveLace said. "But they're the pastors who'd be coming out in the event of a major emergency."

How will the program work?

As emergency management director, LoveLace will activate a disaster plan, part of which is to notify Reed. Reed will then call out the pastors, who will be on the scene, decked out in bright orange vests.

"They would be crossing (police) lines and going in places to comfort people," LoveLace says. "They're for the emotional needs of the victims and the responders."

Pastors won't actually help with the job of patching up wounds or evacuating victims.

"We're supposed to be watching the people who do it to determine their needs,"

Brackett said.

The pastors are there to help with the stress disasters put on victims and emergency workers, LoveLace said.

"The intensity of emotions on the part of the victims and those who have to go and minister to them is on such a high level there's a great need for people who are not faced with the crisis, but with the people involved in the crisis," Brackett said.

He says the county should be prepared and ask itself some tough questions.

"When is it going to happen and have we been faithful in the sense that we're moving in that direction?" he asks.

All three men say Cleveland County, though rural, isn't immune from major catastrophes.

"We're in every traffic pattern," says LoveLace, noting that planes flying over the area are getting ready to land at Charlotte, Asheville and Spartanburg airports.

"We're in the drift, if the wind is right, of three nuclear plants," Brackett notes.

"You have to plan for Armageddon almost," says LoveLace. "The disaster pastors may not be called out for 10 years as a group, or they could be called out tonight."

Double Shoals Baptist takes its commitment to missions, scholarships to heart

LAWNDALE — If you're a Spangler and you live in Lawndale, chances are you've been to Double Shoals Baptist Church.

Of the people who founded the church back in 1899, only three were not Spanglers, and two of those were related to the family.

But the story of Double Shoals Baptist Church goes farther and deeper than just one family.

"When we came here, we were welcomed by everyone, not just by the people in our age group," said Cindy Aguerro, who recently joined the congregation at Double Shoals.

"It really felt like I'd been here all my life."

Mrs. Aguerro's story is typical to this country church, said Theresa Lowe, the church's historian and a longtime member.

Mrs. Lowe wouldn't toot her own horn, but Carl Spangler said she's taken so much pride in recording the church's history, that she was given an award by the N.C. State Baptist Convention.

Seven people gathered around a table in a recent addition to the growing church to talk about where Double Shoals is going and where it's been.

Ralph Spangler has been at the church all his life and fondly remembers when he and his brother were paid between $4 and $6 a year to be sextons.

"We had a big potbellied stove to keep the place warm, and we'd have to carry in some water," said Spangler.

Annie Katherine Bowen joined the church in 1947, and at the time she said she was befuddled by separate entrances for men and women members.

"At the church where I used to go they didn't do that, so when I came in I just sat there like an idiot 'cause I didn't know what was going on," Mrs. Bowen laughed.

Mrs. Bowen and Spangler's wife were among the first to be baptized in Double Shoal's current building, which was constructed in 1949.

In 102 years, the church has gone through three buildings and only 13 pastors, one of which can be found in the annals of many a local church history.

"Somebody swallowed a coin one day, and everybody wanted to call a doctor," said Ralph Spangler.

"Someone said to call Preacher Suttle (J.W. Suttle) 'cause he could get money out of anyone."

Spangler told another anecdote about the circuit-riding preacher:

"Preacher Suttle married a couple one time, and the man asked him, 'How much do I owe you?' to which Preacher Suttle replied, 'How much do you think she's worth.' The man held out a dollar and asked Preacher Suttle if he had any change."

Spangler said a dollar was worth a lot more back then.

The church's history of pastors has been a favorable one, according to Carl Spangler, and the tradition hasn't stopped with Eric Davis, Double Shoal's current pastor.

"We've had great pastors, a unified membership and a sweet spirit of giving," said Spangler.

"When I've talked to past pastors they've all told me every other place is a step down from Double Shoals," Davis said.

Davis is working on his Master's in Divinity at Gardner-Webb University. He says education is just as important to the congregation as it is to him.

"The church is focused on education. They give college scholarships to every student in the congregation."

The "sweet spirit of giving" shown by church members doesn't stop with college scholarships. The congregation has a 50-year commitment to giving to missions.

"Even though the amount of money it costs to fund the missions has increased, we've still done it," said Mrs. Lowe.

According to those interviewed at the church, a theme of unification and a commitment to their faith while enjoying each other in fellowship runs through Double Shoals Baptist Church. Whether it's in the 40- or 50-member strong youth group or the Double Jollies, the senior citizens group, Double Shoals Baptist Church exemplifies everything in which they believe.

THE SHELBY STAR

Double Shoals Baptist Church celebrates 90 years of existence

Roads, or the lack of them, started the talk about a new church.

In a dry season it wasn't so bad, although three miles was three miles, no matter how you figured it.

But let a little rain come down and watch what happened: those crude roads etched in Cleveland County's red clay were transformed into slimy pits that tried to catch and hold any unfortunate man, beast or machine stumbling within its grip.

Traveling three miles to church on foot or in a buggy was almost impossible.

So in 1898, folks in the Double Shoals community — lots of Spanglers and Greens — met at the home of Barbary Spangler and talked about organizing a new church closer to their area than Zion Baptist Church.

On July 2, 1899 — the eve of a new century — their dream came true. A group of 16 people met at the Bob Stockton residence (present home of Florence Scism Turner) and organized Double Shoals Baptist Church.

The Methodist Church at Double Shoals made available their church to the new group of Baptists until they could build one of their own, a project completed in 1901.

Ninety years after the church organized, Double Shoals Baptist Church remains a vital part of the community. On Sunday, June 4, the church will celebrate its 90th anniversary from 10 a.m. until noon. Dinner on the grounds will follow. All living pastors will be present.

Church members are looking for photos of all the charter members. Those missing are John Spangler, Hulda Crowe Spangler and E.A. Morgan.

The other charter members include Barbara Hendrick Spangler, Tom and Maryann Spangler, John Spangler, W. Schenck Spangler, J. Mac Gree, Missouri Spangler Green, Lou Green, J.W. Spangler, Emma Laughlin Spangler, A. Dixon Spangler, Patience Green Spangler, George Robert Stockton and Martha Williams Stockton.

Theresa Lowe is the church historian and has delved into the records for a sketch of how Double Shoals Baptist grew and developed.

The Rev. C.S. Cashwell took the honors as the church's first pastor, and he held forth Sunday mornings in a one-room frame building about 20 by 40 feet. The place had separate doors for men and women.

Baptisms were performed in the First Broad River which coursed through the middle of the community and gave it a name and a place in history. Double Shoals — quite a unique feature for the First Broad or any other river for that matter. It was near this spot that the first manufacturing plant in Cleveland County was built. The county's industry was born there in the form of a small textile operation.

Calvin Eskridge remembered when they built the plant. In 1910, his thoughts may have returned to that long-ago day as his entire 85 years rushed past him the instant he plunged into the waters of the First Broad. Down he went and up he came, except that on the return trip, he was baptized in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost. Eskridge was not only the oldest member of Double Shoals Baptist Church to be baptized, but probably the first to be sitting in a chair when he went into the river.

A total of $9,200 bought the church a brand new brick building in 1924. The complex included an auditorium and 11 Sunday School rooms partitioned off by folding chairs. The Rev. J.W. Suttle, "The Little Preacher," was pastor there at the time and had been since 1916, two years before the United States entered World War I. Suttle would remain at the helm of the church until three years after the close of World War II, the longest period than any other pastor of the church.

In 1949, the year after Suttle had stepped down as pastor, Double Shoals got its third and present building.

Some highlights of the church's history: In 1959, Double Shoals was recognized as the first Advanced Standard Sunday School in the Southern Baptist Convention. The first church song books were purchased in 1930, and four members were elected to distribute and collect the books for each church service.

Always strong in missions, the church began a Lord's Acre project in which each family set aside one acre of land or a portion of their weekly work with earnings going to the Foreign Missions Board in support of the Rev. George Cowser in Brazil. After his death, the money went to his wife, Hilda. The event takes place on Thanksgiving night, and any excess funds are divided between the church education fund and Gardner-Webb College.

Education has always been high on the church's priority list. The church helped support Boiling Springs High School and its successor, Gardner-Webb College. In 1930, the Double Shoals WMU appointed a committee to collect a chicken or the value of a chicken from each home and turn the money over to the college. The purpose — to buy books for the library.

That's the Double Shoals Baptist Church history in a nutshell. The story will be fleshed out considerably on June 4 at the 90th anniversary celebration. It will be an old-fashioned affair with plenty of good preaching from the current pastor, the Rev. Russell Hinton, good food and a reunion of many people united again in their love of the church.

HISTORY OF DOUBLE SHOALS BAPTIST CHURCH

On a hot summer day July 22, 1899, in a grove near the home of G. R. Stockton, now owned by W. C. Scism, Double Shoals Baptist was organized. The records from that date to 1907 have been lost and the correct date on the record cannot be given.

At the organization Rev. A. C. Irvin acted as moderator and Rev. D. F. Putnam as clerk or secretary, with members from Zion, Pleasant Grove, New Bethel, and possibly Union. Twenty-two members from three churches joined the Double Shoals church.

Fourteen of these members are all the clerk could find trace of. They are as follows: E. A. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Green and daughter Lou, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Spangler, and son John, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Spangler, G. R. Stockton, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Spangler, and Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Spangler.

The church elected Rev. C. S. Cashwell as pastor, and J. M. Green as clerk and treasurer, E. A. Morgan as Sunday School Supt., and J. M. Green and E. A. Morgan as deacons.

The Methodists were kind enough to let the new organization use their buildings until one could be built.

Brother Cashwell served the church faithful for one year after which Rev. Z. D. Harrill, J. V. Devinney, and T. J. Moss, all served the church faithfully, but the correct dates of their pastorate could not be found. But in some way Rev. Z. D. Harrill served the church at two different times, in December 1907 the church called Rev. Z. D. Harrill the second time as pastor. He served until December 1908 when the church called Rev. A. C. Irvin as pastor.

The church grew and prospered under his leadership for seven years. He closed his work in December 1915. When the present pastor, Rev. J. W. Suttles was called.

On Friday before the fourth Sunday in November 1919 the church ordained the following brethern as deacons: John W. Scism, C. R. Spangler, Clarence Wilson, and H. C. Royster.

In September 1919 C. R. Spangler was elected as church clerk, succeeding J. M. Green. In this capacity he served until August 1924 when Carl M. Spangler was elected.

The church was rebuilt under the leadership of Rev. J. W. Suttles in 1924.

On the second Sunday P M in September 1924 Brother L. B. Scism was ordained into the ministry.

In January 1927 Mrs. C. R. Spangler was elected as church clerk. She served until August 1928, when the present clerk J. W. Costner was elected.

The King's Mountain Baptist Association met with Double Shoals Church for the first time in the history of the church in October 1927.

The church ordained in February 1928 the following brethern as deacons: S. B. Eskridge, J. A. Horn, John R. Peeler, Carl M. Spangler, and Clyde Cornwell.

The present beloved pastor, Rev. J. W. Suttles, has lead the church to a present membership of 180, has baptised a large part of the membership, has saw two young men already mentioned go out to serve the Lord as preachers and a number of Christians to Bless the world where ever they go.

The Sunday School has also made great progress along with the church and has been recognized as standard for the past five years. Deacon C. R. Spangler is the faithful Superintendant.

Also the W. M. U. with all its organization with Mrs. H. C. Royster as director are doing splendid work at this time.

Respectfully,

J. W. Costner, Church Clerk

Welcome back to Double Shoals, dear friends. For a long time we have planned for this day and looked forward to your sharing it with us. Double Shoals has been built on the "Cornerstone of Faith" and each of you have been some of the mortar that has held that cornerstone in place. We are extremely glad that you have chosen to share with us this day of celebration as we observe our one hundredth anniversary.

There will be an opportunity to view the displays after lunch.

Double Shoals Baptist Church

1899 - 1999

In 1898, at a revival meeting at the home of Barbary Spangler, talk began of the need for a church closer home. It was a long way to walk or travel by buggy the three miles to Zion Baptist Church. On July 2, 1899, a group of sixteen dedicated people met in an oak grove at the home of Bob Stockton (the present home of Lee Scism) and organized Double Shoals Baptist Church. The Methodist Church of Double Shoals graciously invited the new fellowship to meet in their building until a meeting place of their own could be acquired. The new church grew to a membership of forty-five by the end of the first year.

The Reverend C. S. Cashwell served as the first pastor. J. Mac Green as Clerk and Sunday School Superintendent. The church also set aside E. A. Morgan and J. Mac Green as deacons.

In 1901 the church erected its own meeting place, a one room frame building about 20 by 40 feet, with two doors - one for the women and one for the men. That same year the church enjoyed its largest annual growth, baptizing thirty-three new members and adding eleven others by transfer of letter.

In 1910 the church baptized its oldest candidate. Calvin Eskridge, age 85, was baptized in a chair in First Broad River.

The church's second building was begun in January of 1924 and completed three months later at a cost of $9,200. The brick structure consisted of an auditorium and eleven Sunday School rooms, partitioned off by folding doors. Reverend J. W. Suttle was pastor at this time, serving the longest period in the history of the church, from January 1916 through December, 1948.

In March, 1949, the church's third and present building was completed and in 1964, an annex for education and fellowship was added. Renovation and air conditioning of the auditorium took place in the summer of 1973. A church pastorium was erected in 1960. The new Family Life/Fellowship building was built in 1992.

The Sunday School became a standard school in 1925 and continued to maintain this except for three years during WWII. In 1958, the church became the first Advanced Standard Sunday School in North Carolina, and in 1959 was recognized as the first Advanced Standard Sunday school in the Southern Baptist Convention.

The church has maintained a variety of organizations in addition to Sunday School through the years. Weekly Bible Study or officers' and teachers' meetings began in the 1920s. B.Y.P.U. or Church Training provided an undergirding influence and extra training for church members. W. M. U. and Brotherhood have kept a healthy emphasis on Missions. Missionary education for young people has been provided through Acteens, GAs, RAs, and Mission Friends. A Youth program was begun in 1978, discontinued a few years and renewed in 1988. A weekly news bulletin "The Chimes" has been published since 1953. A music program has offered training in church music. It is uncertain when the first song books were purchased, but in 1918 one hundred books were ordered. Four members were elected to distribute and collect the books for each church service.

From the beginning, the church has stressed missions. During the depression years, ten percent or more of the annual budget went to the Cooperative Program. In 1952, the Brotherhood initiated the Harvest Festival. Beginning as a Lord's Acre project, a program where each family would set aside one acre of land, or portion of their public work week as the Lord's Acre, with the earnings to go to Foreign Missions, supporting Rev. George Cowsert in Brazil and after his death, his wife, Hilda. Our current missionaries, chosen in 1998, are Ralph and Tammy Stocks, serving the Gypsy or Romany people in Hungary. Becoming the highest moment of inspiration for the church year, the Harvest Festival takes place on Thanksgiving night with any money exceeding the $3000 toward our missionary support, going for higher education, one half to our church scholarship fund and the other half to G.W.U. scholarships for Christian ministry.

Four ministers of the Gospel have been ordained by Double Shoals. They were L. B. Scism in 1924, Leland Royster in June 1938, J. W. Costner in November 1938, and Brian Johnson in 1989.

The church has been blessed with outstanding pastors through the years. Each one has brought us God's message and contributed to the ongoing of Double Shoals Baptist Church as God led him.

The seed that was planted one hundred years ago, and the seeds that have continued to be sown throughout the years continue to grow and bear fruit, and will do so in the years to come.

A. R. Ramsey bought a 24-acre tract of land in 1867. How the land was developed or what was on the land when he bought it is uncertain. However when he sold it in 1867 to W. A. Jackson there were Crist and saw mills and the Double Shoals Cotton Factory on it. Wood has passed down that cloth was made at this factory to help clothe the men during the Civil War. Surviving the Civil War apparently the first textile mill in Cleveland County was built there in 1868 or 1871 by Alexander Jackson. Whether it was this same Cotton Factory expanded or another facility built is uncertain. Several early legal documents refer to the factory road and the 1860 census lists Mr. Ramsey as a merchant. Progress was taking place. By the post Civil War period it had become quite a thriving little town and the village then began to grow. The new water mill was water-driven by power from the river. It consisted of a small wooden building equipped with second hand machinery, powered by an old-fashioned, one of a kind wheel. Houses were built for the mill workers, as well as larger houses for the landowners and privately owned houses. The area around produced very fertile farm land with the first Deep River flowing behind the mill supplying the energy source to run the mill and the river and its banks producing fertile land to grow crops. A company store was built and as early as 1871 a telephone was installed to communicate with the newly

TABLE OF CONTENTS

A piece of history like this could not be preserved without the help of a lot of people. First of all the support of the church to undertake the project. The planning and leadership of the Centennial Committee - Theresa Lowe, Johnny Bowen, Yvonne Hoyle, Rev. Brian Johnson, Jim Scism, Carl Spangler, Dot Spangler, Ralph Spangler, Ray Spangler. The Mission Action Circle who agreed first on to support and help with the listing and assembling of the project and the Church Historical Committee - Theresa Lowe, Margie Christopher, Janice Spangler, who strive to preserve our heritage. Those who came to do the actual listing: Warren & Yvonne Hoyle, Brian Johnson, Theresa Lowe, Dwight & Ruby Perry, Wanda Queen, Larry Scism, James Scism, Don Spangler, Carolyn Spangler, Joyce Spangler, Ralph Spangler, Ray & Vida Spangler, Sherry Spangler, and Faye Towery. And then to you who helped assemble the typed material into the book. And of course it had to be typed - a cherished duty of Theresa Spangler Lowe. (please forgive my mistakes.).

To the best of our ability we have tried to list everyone buried in the cemetery. In the older part of the cemetery and the Methodist portion, we did not have a plat or any guidelines. Many of the rows do not run evenly and some that do, have stones out of line. Of course many of the names were difficult to read, some impossible. With the help of shaving creme (works wonderful), rubbings, and a steel brush, we tried our best. Even after the book is printed, we hope you will notify us of any mistakes and of any persons that might be buried in the many unmarked graves that are there. We have tried to list as near as possible the information in the form that was on the stones. Many of the women were listed by initials only, making that a bit confusing also. We have included the plat from the newer part of the cemetery and of the Methodist part hoping that it might help you locate a grave should you not be familiar with our cemetery.

OUR HALLOWED GROUNDS DOUBLE SHOALS BAPTIST CHURCH

The earliest beginnings of Double Shoals Baptist Church cemetery is uncertain. It is assumed that it probably began as a family plot since it was on land that was formerly owned by William "Bill" Hendrick and he and his brother, Jack, were the first buried there in 1859. This was forty years before Double Shoals Baptist Church was organized. The Methodist Church was perhaps there as Bill Hendrick deeded an acre of land to the Methodist Episcopal Church "including the Meeting House now built and all the improvements thereon" in August 1857. At the same time he deeded a half acre including the school house now built on land adjoining the church property to the appointed school committee of the Double Shoals District. Bill Hendrick had purchased some three hundred plus acres of land in the area and several of his children married and purchased land adjoining his land. Barbara Hendrick Spangler and her husband, Jonathan Spangler, purchased 92 acres in 1862, joining on the southwest side (A.P. Spangler land) and daughter and husband Bob & Charity Stockton had bought land (later Florence Scism Turner land) on the west joining Bill Hendrick and the Jonathan Spangler property. The earliest known grave is that of Jackson Hendrick who drowned in the First Broad River between the village of Double Shoals and Zion Baptist Church in the Spring of 1859 - 15 March. His body was not found until the 17 or 19th. His father, Bill Hendrick, died several months later and is buried there also, as eventually was his Bill's wife, Charity Love Hendrick. In current remembrance there was never a marker to Jack Hendrick (probably was a fieldstone, long time diminished). Bill and Charity did have stones that were quite deteriorated but were replaced about fifteen years ago by descendant, Claire Greene.

At altitude of 995 feet, Double Shoals, a community between Big Harris Creek and the west side of First Broad River, was settled in the early nineteenth century. In 1845 A. R. Homesley bought a 230 acre tract of land on both sides of First Broad River in Double Shoals. How the land was developed or what was on the land when he bought it is uncertain. However when he sold it in 1867 to W. A. Jackson there were Grist and saw mills and the Double Shoals Cotton Factory on it. Word has passed down that cloth was made at this factory to help clothe the men during the Civil War. Surviving the Civil War supposedly the first textile mill in Cleveland County was built there in 1868 or 1871 by Abernathy Jackson. Whether it was this same Cotton Factory expanded or another facility built is uncertain. Several early legal documents refer to the factory road and the 1860 census lists Mr. Homesley as a merchant. Progress was taking place. By the post Civil War period, it had become quite a thriving little area and the village then began to grow. The newer textile mill was water-driven by power from the river. It consisted of a small wooden building equipped with second hand machinery, powered by an old-fashioned, over-slot water wheel. Houses were built for the mill workers, as well as larger houses for the landlords and privately owned houses. The area around produced wonderful farm land with the First Broad River flowing behind the mill supplying the energy source to run the mill and the river and its streams producing fertile land to grow crops.
